FINANCE AND TRADE.

CYPICE OF THE DAILY APPEAL, Мимгита, July 12, 1870. The impending conflict between the North and the West and South is attracting attention. The New York Bullefin, one of the organs of Wall street, rather favors it. In its last number that paper says: "The West and South have many interests in common, and between them no rivalry exists, nor any consid erable variance of condition upon which from going and plaster, and other mathe growth and progress of each is directly dependent. the New York Tribune says it would in the end prove a godsend to the South H otton could, by the success in Iudia and Egypt be pushed down to ten cents and held there. It would approof the irrational greed of the cotton planter. It would force him to general agriculture, Cotton bills are making very slowly.

It would plant vines on Southern hill-sides and mills by her water courses. It would bear to build her own wagons and modd her own wagons and modd her own plows. It would make cabbage-growing an important art, and dignify the production of sweet potatoes. It would develop thrift, frugality, forecast, contrivance in her inhabitants. This view is enforced in a letter from Mr. Henry C. Norton, who wrote from Rome, 624, on the 22d, to the editor of the New York Februariat, who said in his issue of the 23d, to the editor of the New York Februariat, who said in his issue of the 23d, to the editor of the New York Februariat, who said in his issue of the 23d, to the editor of the New York Februariat, while tax-payers buy at 73d/75. We now turn to that of cotton manufacturing at the South The New York Price Current thinks the in succeeding years the cotton manufac turing branch of industry will be, to considerable extent, transferred from the the Eastern States to the South, where according to the testimony of many practical observers, cotton factories can be operated to better advantage. It has been estimated by a Northern manufacture who has had some experience in Georgi during the last two years, that from two to three millions of dollars would be saved annually to each of the principa cotton States, by working up the raw material at and near the sources of supply. St. Paul... It appears that these yarns can be made be per pound cheaper than at the North, and when sent there for sale, after paying the usual commissions, have returned a profit to the manufacturer of 10c per pound. It is said that a Northern manufacturer, who had that a Northern manufacturer, who had that a Northern manufacturer, who had become more settled.
